INDIA BECOMES THE FIRST COUNTRY TO RECEIVE A GLOBAL LICENSE FOR POLYMETALLIC SULPHIDE EXPLORATION

India achieved a major milestone in deep-sea exploration by becoming the first country to secure a global exploration licence for polymetallic sulphides (PMS) in the Carlsberg Ridge of the Indian Ocean. The licence was granted by the International Seabed Authority under a 15-year exploration contract, giving India exclusive rights to study and explore valuable mineral deposits in a 10,000 sq. km area. This achievement

India's position as a global leader in deep-sea resource exploration and supports its long-term Deep Ocean Mission.

Polymetallic sulphides are rich in critical minerals such as copper, zinc, gold, silver, nickel, cobalt, and manganese. These minerals are essential for manufacturing electric vehicle batteries, renewable energy technologies, electronics, aerospace equipment, and advanced defence systems. As the global demand for critical minerals continues to rise, the licence provides India with an opportunity to secure future mineral resources while reducing dependence on imports.

The exploration will be carried out by the Ministry of Earth Sciences through the National Centre for Polar and Ocean Research. It also aligns with India's Blue Economy strategy, which focuses on the sustainable use of ocean resources for economic growth, scientific research, and environmental conservation. Officials have emphasized that all exploration activities will follow international environmental standards to protect fragile marine ecosystems. This historic achievement highlights India's growing capabilities in marine science, deep-sea technology, and strategic resource exploration. By expanding its presence in the Indian Ocean, India is strengthening its energy security, technological innovation, and global leadership in the exploration of critical seabed minerals.

HISTORY OF INDIA THOUSAND PILLAR TEMPLE

The Thousand Pillar Temple is one of the finest examples of medieval temple architecture in India and a treasured symbol of Telangana's rich cultural heritage. Located in Hanamkonda, near Warangal, the temple was built in 1163 CE during the reign of Rudra Deva, the first independent ruler of the Kakatiya dynasty. It was designed by the renowned architect Ramakrishna Sthapati, whose remarkable craftsmanship is evident throughout the monument.

The temple is dedicated to three principal Hindu deities—Shiva, Vishnu, and Surya—making it a Trikutalaya, or a temple with three sanctums. This unique design reflects the religious harmony and artistic vision of the Kakatiya rulers. The temple is renowned for its beautifully carved pillars, intricate stone sculptures, and elegant star-shaped platform. Although its name suggests a thousand pillars, the title symbolizes the numerous finely sculpted pillars that create a stunning visual effect rather than an exact count.

One of the temple's most admired features is the magnificent black basalt Nandi statue, which faces the shrine of Lord Shiva. The statue is carved from a single block of stone and is celebrated for its smooth finish and lifelike appearance. Every part of the temple, from its ceilings to its pillars, displays intricate carvings of floral patterns, mythological figures, animals, and geometric designs, showcasing the extraordinary skill of Kakatiya artisans.

Over the centuries, the temple suffered damage due to invasions, wars, and natural weathering. Recognizing its immense historical and architectural value, the Archaeological Survey of India undertook restoration and conservation efforts to preserve this iconic monument. Today, the Thousand Pillar Temple stands as a major tourist attraction and pilgrimage site, drawing visitors from across India and around the world. It remains a lasting testament to the architectural brilliance, engineering excellence, and cultural legacy of the Kakatiya dynasty, inspiring admiration for its timeless beauty and historical significance.
